

High-End Commercial Office

Location: London EC2

Code Security Systems often partners with a great fit out Specialist Company, that we have a long and fruitful relationship with.

This particular project was that of a high end office refurbishment, where we was more than happy to apply our security knowledge. To achieve the compromise between aesthetics and functionality we had to combine a mixture of both which we think seamlessly does just that.....

Whilst designing the security systems with the client's specific requirements in mind, there was many factors we had to consider in the design. The first was that this particular project was on a certain floor of a building that already had its own security measures to gain access.

In addition, the client spent an awful lot of money on making this new space into a very high end office area, with extravagant wood panelling and on show ceilings throughout.

A great deal of security was installed including access control systems, video entry systems and CCTV systems, yet all of the cabling for all systems are totally hidden from the eye and what is on show for functional reasons has been blended seamlessly to create a beautiful end result and a very happy client.
